With the inauguration of the East Asian Summit (EAS) in 2005, a tangle of regional institutions competes for attention and resources, and as long as the 16-nation ASEAN+6 framework continues to coexist with the 13-nation ASEAN+3 (APT) and the 21-member Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) frameworks, there is argument as to why the various regional institutions have emerged and co-existed in Asia. This seminar analyses the importance of the sequence of regional institution building to understanding this puzzle.

Takashi Terada is Professor of International Relations at Organization for Asian Studies, Waseda University, Tokyo. He received his Ph.D from Australian National University in 1999. Before taking up the current position in April 2008, he was an assistant professor at National University of Singapore and associate professor at Waseda University. His area of specialty is international political economy in Asia and the Pacific, especially regionalism and regional integration, as well as Japanese politics and foreign policy.

The seminar is free and open to all but please RSVP to Ms Sheila Flores:
